

Kenny Perry – 2003

PGA Tour star Kenny Perry has become one of the top golfers in the world. As of the 2009 PGA Tour season, he had notched thirteen victories on the PGA Tour, his first coming in 1991 at The Memorial Tournament. He is a member of the Western Kentucky University Athletic Hall of Fame, and in 1995 helped to design, fund, and build Country Creek Golf Course in Franklin, Kentucky, a public course with a moderate fee structure and player friendly design. He was honored by the Golf Writers Association of America in 2002 with the Charles Bartlett Award for unselfish contributions to the betterment of society.
